DENBY MAY QUIT OVER HALTING OF
POLE EXPEDITIONReports From Naval Circles Say He Feels Keenly Action of President.O. K. BY CONGRESS SOUGHTIntimation Given at White House That If Congressional Approval Is Given Proposed Expedition Properations Will Be at Once Resumed.By United Press.
WASHINGTON, Feb. 15.—Resignation of Secretary of the Navy Denby as a result of the abrupt halting by President Coolidge of the dirigible Shenandoah's North Pole trip was reported in Navy circles to be imminent.

Denby, it was said among Navy officers, felt this more keenly than the adoption of the Senate resolution conditioning him in connection with the naval oil reserve and demanding that he resign in other quarters. It was intimated that Denby may have taken this step to afford Denby an opportunity to quit the cabinet voluntarily.

President Coolidge yesterday ordered all preparations for the polar expedition suspended pending some form of congressional approval of the project. It was intimated that if such approval is given, the preparations will be immediately resumed. The decision of the President was announced in the following statement issued by secretary Denby:

"Orders to cease preparations for the polar expedition were issued today by the secretary of the navy. The president, having been informed that considerable opposition existed to the required expenditure of $350,000, instructed the department not to proceed with the expedition at this time or until naval bills have been considered and Congress given an opportunity, if it desires, to express its views upon the polar expedition."

The order mystified members of Congress for two reasons. First, there has been very little opposition in Congress to the flight, and it has been based on the value of the expedition and the danger it involves, rather than on the expense. Second, Denby personally told the House Naval Affairs Committee the flight would cost $133,000 and now it is stated it will cost $350,000. The discrepancy is not understood in Congress.

The polar expedition of the dirigible was Denby's pet project, recently he made a stirring appeal to the House Naval Affairs Committee not to throw any obstacle in the way of the trip.

DEGREE CONCLAVE
AT GREENSBURG

GREENSBURG, Feb. 15.—Nearly 100 Odd Fellows including in the visiting members from Mount Pleasant, Scottsdale, Pleasant Unity, Juniper, Jeannette, Adamsburg, Joppatowne and even one from an island lodge were the guests of the Odd Fellows at a special rally or booster meeting Thursday evening at Odd Fellows hall.

The immediate occasion of the big rally was the conferring of the 32nd degree upon a class of nine candidates, from Greensburg, Jeannette, Pleasant Unity, Juniper and four from Mount Pleasant. The degree team from Mount Pleasant, numbering about 50, accompanied by other members of the lodge, came here in a special car from Penn. and not only gave a floor drill work in a pleasing manner but their interpretation of a parade was splendidly given.

At the close of the degree work a local lodge was formally closed, on the stage of candidates and the large crowd was thoroughly entertained for a short time. The departure of the special car 1:30 P. M. Archie McPhail and El. Alden of Mount Pleasant, both sang most fascinating way and were artistically applauded. Major T. O. derson of Mount Pleasant and others from other towns made short but stable addresses.

Next Thursday evening the candidates, accompanied by members of local lodge, will go to Mount Pleasant, where the second degree will be conferred.

CONNELLVILLE POLICE FORCE BEING EQUIPPED WITH TEAR GAS BATONS

The Connellsville Police Department is just a step ahead of the Philadelphia public safety bureau. It would seem, according to an announcement here today that officers in the city are already carrying the tear gas baton which is being tested for use by the officers of the Quaker City. The new batons, which are built like a mace, arrived yesterday.

The ones distributed to the Connellsville officers are short, resembling a handy-billy and may be carried in a pocket. Others sold by the distributing company are longer.

When not needed, the gas weapon baton can be used as a "persuader" as were the clubs formerly carried by police officers. The weapon is so constructed that a charge of gas is carried about in it at all times. This load is sure to fire at any time, no matter how long it has been in the baton. Loads are easily carried by the officer. There is a safety catch on the handle and the trigger, a little button, can be released only when the catch is opened.

The new weapon will be carried by officers raiding disorderly houses or suspected speakeasies. The load is sufficient to subdue many people at one time without injury to any.

When they were demonstrated here recently, Chief 31, Mr. Murphy immediately placed an order and the shipment arrived yesterday.

DEPORTATION OF HABITUAL GUNMEN

Deportation from Fayette county of all persons twice convicted of the possession of firearms, a general search for deadly weapons throughout the county and prison sentences instead of fines for all persons found guilty of carrying concealed weapons were recommended Friday by a coroner's jury and placed the responsibility of the death of Robert W. Mason, Jr. upon El. Stevenson, a negro, who will be held on a charge of murder to await the action of the March grand jury.

The members of the jury, including two women, which sat in Uniontown, also commended the action of Mason in the performance of his duty and condemned the "cowardly act" of Stevenson.

District Attorney E. D. Brown, County Detective A. W. Bell, State Police and other officers who assisted in the search for Stevenson were highly praised by the jury.

Coroner S. A. Balla presided at the inquest, being assisted by Assistant District Attorney Dean D. Sturges and County Detective Bell. The members of the jury were Mrs. Francis W. Umbel, foreman; Mrs. Lida K. Balla, Samuel R. Shuman, Rev. T. W. Colbourne, R. S. McCord and J. S. Albright.

By United Press.

PARIS, Feb. 15.—"Dapper Dan" Collins, described as the most dangerous crook who ever operated in the United States and believed to have discussed crimes of recent years in America is not the least bit afraid to go back home, he told Paris police today.

Collins was recognized and arrested by a New York detective who came here to bring back two men wanted in connection with the Shattuck jewel robbery in New York. "Dapper Dan" admitted his identity but denied he was guilty of any wrong doing.

NEW YORK, Feb. 15.—The arrest in Paris of "Dapper Dan" Collins, reported in private cables to the police department here, may cast light on some of the most widely discussed crimes in recent years.

Collins is supposed to have information about the slaying of Joseph B. Elwell, society man and white expert, found murdered in his luxurious New York home about four years ago. Collins' name also has been mentioned in connection with the murder of William Desmond Taylor, Hollywood film director.

EXTENT OF SENATOR
GREEN'S WOUND NOT YET DETERMINED

By United Press.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 15.—An X-ray photograph was taken today to locate a bullet which struck Senator Frank Greene of Vermont as he was returning to his hotel with Mrs. Greene. The bullet, believed to have been fired by a prohibition agent pursuing bootleggers, struck Greene over the left eye.

At the Emergency Hospital, where Greene was taken, it was stated he is in a "very good" condition. The extent of the injury will not be known until the photograph is studied.

Greene and Mrs. Greene were approaching the hotel where they live and had just passed an alley when several shots were fired.

Police seeking the persons responsible for the shooting arrested Prohibition Agent Otto Fisher, who was in the alley near Greene's hotel when the shooting took place.

All available detectives are hunting the bootleggers who escaped in the confusion.

DRIVE TO RAISE $1,000
FOR EDUCATION WILL BE LAUNCHED HERE TOMORROWCampaign Part of County One of Fayette Sunday School Association.L. G. HOOVER ITS HEAD

Tomorrow will be "county day" in the Sunday schools of the Connellsville District. In other words the drive for the district's quota of $1,000 toward the proposed $10,000 fund that is to be raised in the county for educational work of the Fayette County Sunday School Association will be launched.

President L. G. Hoover of the district organization made the following report of the campaign which has been in progress for four weeks and also to get from the former service men an expression concerning the American Legion adjusted compensation bill which will soon be placed before Congress.

Post Commander Frank Sweeney presided at the opening and then turned the affair over to John T. Wirtz, the toastmaster. Max C. Floto brought to the meeting the view of the compensation from a service man's standpoint. Attorney Walter E. Schenck, secretary of the county chapter of the Red Cross, was very entertaining and also told of the work of his organization as it pertained to disabled service men.

Wooda N. Carr, of Uniontown, gave a talk that was most interesting to the Legionnaires. He spoke of the conception of a citizen as to the place and purpose of the American Legion in the community. He laid stress on the solidarity and comradeship in numbers. He said he believed that as the Legion grew older there would be an increased desire on the part of service men to enroll in its ranks.

Correll J. Poole, deputy commander of the 23rd District read and discussed the preamble to the constitution of the Legion for the benefit of new members and old.

Capt. A. R. Skemp gave a short report on the drive, showing 155 members had paid up. He urged that the canvassers work a few days longer so that this figure would be increased to a mark which would insure as good a standing in the past had last year.

The LaFayette Post of Uniontown is leading the district at present with 22 members.

Music was furnished by Kiefer's orchestra and singing was led by H. E. Mason. Uniontown entertained also furnished a number of features.

A. R. Skemp was general chairman of the membership drive. Carl Moody was chairman of the committee in charge of arrangements for last night's celebration and other members of this committee were L. W. Carpenter, J. W. Peterson, Robert Baxter and F. W. Marshall.

Over the week-end the operators are expected to compose their internal differences, probably agreeing on a three-year renewal.

Phase, Presented by Superintendent
H. K. Smith; Big Things Promised

One of the best and most entertaining and interesting events in the Dunbar Township High School was the community meeting Friday evening. The aim of the meeting was to get better cooperation from the parents with the officials of the school and to have them become better acquainted with the activities in progress at all times.

The orchestra, composed of Catherine Colbert, Anna Klinger, Madeline Meyers, Howard Clark, Lewis Madden, Clyde Gangawere, Sarah Moine, Walter Bates, Thurman Dennis, Maudey Cault, Dale Messenger, Harry McDonald, Ella Cropp, Harry Lloyd and William Glick, all of whom are members of the school, under the personal direction of H. K. Smith, who is known by most of the students as the "jazz band" for his ability on the piano, provided music.

The opening of the program was a selection by the orchestra. This was followed by an oration, "American Ideals," by Nellie Clark. A reading by Edna Chelland entitled "Old Mother Goose" followed. Then came two duets by Miss M. H. Wilt and H. S. Basom. "One Fleeting Hour" and "Absence." A violin solo, "Stephanie Quatre," by Miss Catherine Colbert, a freshman residing at Dawson, was one of the best attractions on the program.

"Democracy's Supreme Gift" was given by Lloyd Chris, was followed by an amusing read, "Betty at the Baseball Game," by Lillian Arnold. The glove club, under the direction of Miss M. H. Wilt and H. S. Basom, gave a fine account of itself on two following occasions, rendering "A Vision of Beauty" and "The Newcomer," the first time, and "Grandmother's Garden" and "Twelve the Roses" on the other.

The French play entitled "L'Entente Cordiale" was rendered by Kenneth McClintock, Clyde Gangawere, Earl Lewis, William Gehlho, Paul Martin and Peto Horwatt. A telephone conversation in French was given by Allen Lind.

The orchestra tuned up again and played the war for Superintendent R. K. Smith who spoke on "What Dunbar Township High School Should Be," in which he briefly summed up the history of the school and then pointed out the advantages that should be given to the students, particularly through a special physical director, scientific housekeeping and training for use of latest inventions, mentioning an automobile school and electrical engineering.

The synopsis of the French play was read by Grace Hubbard. Thelma Gangawere was presented with a medal for the best essay on "Abraham Lincoln." It was awarded by the Illinois Watch Company. Certificates for proficiency in typewriting were awarded to Bernice Fowler, Mary Hornell, Howard Clark, Mary Coffman, Henry Rittenberger and Margaret Cunningham.

On the platform was the J. Duell Sander loving cup that was won by Dunbar township's debating team last year. The school hall was filled and parents were conspicuous in the audience.

On Publicity

PUBLICITY FRIENDS MEETIN' THE EDITOR.

The present day craze for publicity is something fierce. In the old days if a fellow had a little of merit, or a reliable establishment, or a good education, or an enviable position, he supposed everybody knew it. He would eventually get on, but not so fast. Everbody but bootleggers and postoffice advertise in some shape or form. Society women, lonely bachelors, professional men, party girls, farmers, business men, ancients, all seek the newspaper columns or billboards. Magazines used to be as thin as a body cracker, but today they bulge with ads. The family newspaper was light and friendly, but today it is unwieldy and harder to manage than a fourteen year old girl, because its so full of ads, both business and society. Look at the big, well lighted and artistic billboards! Lots of us wouldn't know what it was, or wear, or where it spend our evenin's. If it wasn't for billboards. No statesman, no fellow with a little money, no prize fighter, no ambitious woman, or boddie author, is complete without a publicity agent, and they all use the same old system that kept Alice Oakes, J. C.

Bumstead, Cupress, and Benedict, and General Coney in the public eye. Even arctic explorers, who may never return, base publicity agents. Folks that can't afford the luxury of a publicity agent get their advertise in lots of ways—by mixin' up in ever'body's business, by patronizin' intellectual treats, by hangin' around an' loatin' after the prominent, by sittin' good seats at corner stone layins, and by poppin' up at all public functions. An' lots of folks ham their publicity. Some folks "it walk right in" a newspaper office and tell the editor right out, when their point is to leave town, or that so an' so's visitin' 'em, or that a wife or daughter has run off. If a fellow raises an extra big cucumber, he sells the publicity value of it instantly and tears out for a newspaper office. If a fellow drops out of town he identifies his card, he drops the editor a line. Lots of folks run for office just for the publicity, and we think sometimes that people get hit by years just 't it in the paper. Some throw parties just to keep in the public eye. Of course there's lots of parties that never get in the newspapers unless they're talked, but we mean nice parties. There's always been advertisement and publicity work goin' on, but we don't know why it's humped so in the last few years, unless it's because the government went and let it so strong durin' the war. Folks jest reasonin', "well if the government kin get folks to eat cornbread by postin' up big signs, we kin get 'em to eat radishes, grape fruit, an' English walnuts," or "if the Germans kin win converts to ther cause by published propaganda, so kin we." But advertise's great stuff.

The fact that ever'body's usin' it, or tryin' to get in on it, proves it's great stuff.

Fatal Accident Rate in Mines Was Reduced 8 Per Cent

Reports made by the various state mine inspectors to the Department of the Interior, through the Bureau of Mines, show that 2,452 men were killed by accidents at coal mines in the United States in 1923. Of these fatalities, 2,249 occurred as the result of accidents underground, 49 were due to shaft accidents, and 157 to accidents in and around surface plants. The production of coal during the year was 641,478,000 tons; hence the fatality rate for the year was 3.52 per million tons, as compared with 4.15 for 1922.

This reduction of eight per cent in the fatal accident rate per million tons of coal produced in 1923 is equivalent to the saving of 249 lives. The Bureau of Mines points out that it is another way of saying that had the fatality rate of 1922 continued during the past year the number of lives lost would have been 210 more than actually were lost during 1923.

Not only was there a net reduction in the fatality rate from all causes combined, but each of the main causes of coal mine fatalities also showed a decline. Falls of rock and coal which generally account for nearly half of all deaths in coal mines, were responsible for 1,158 fatalities in 1923, which represents a rate of 1.81 per million tons, as compared with 1.90 in 1922. Haulage accidents underground usually cause about 18 per cent of all fatalities, and the reports for 1923 show that 413 deaths were due to this cause, indicating a rate of 0.61 per million tons, as against 0.72 for the previous year. Gas and dust explosions killed 372 men, the fatality rate being 0.58; the previous year's rate was 0.65. Seventy-five deaths were due to electricity, for which class of accidents the fatality rate per million tons was 0.12 as compared with 0.16 the year before. Powder and other explosives caused 115 deaths, representing a rate of 0.18 as compared with 0.19 for 1922.

WHERE A PRESIDENT WORSHIPS

Many of the churches of the national capital are old and unpretentious. But not a few of these old edifices have been the place of worship of a President of the United States. President Roosevelt attended services in the little home of the Dutch Reformed Church. President Harding went, every Sunday, to an old church located in a section of the city which was once the home of many famous men, but which is now far removed from the fashionable center. Above is the First Congregational Church, now entirely surrounded by business houses, which is attended by President Coolidge and Mrs. Coolidge. At the close of the service the President always finds an interested group of people, including many out-of-town visitors, waiting at the entrance to catch a glimpse of him.

Among The Churches

FIRST UNITED PRESBYTERIAN

Where Morton crosses Pittsburgh, Francis J. Scott, D. D., minister. Bible school at 9:45 A. M.; a worship while school; come and see. Bring a new pupil with you. Our school is still growing. Morning worship at 11:00. The sermon is on the subject, "What God Can Do." It is a practical sermon. A high school pupil comes to you with the question, "How Does God Really Help Me Day by Day?" How would you answer him? Will God help me find a new job if I pray? Will he increase my wages if I pray? There are two conceivable ways in which God can answer such prayers. Come and hear the sermon. In the evening at 7:30 the pastor will preach on Ecclesiastes 1:9, "There is Nothing New Under the Sun." Solomon raised the question. He had seen much. Glass was known to the ancients. Gunpowder? The Chinese made fire crackers centuries ago. The power of steam was known before the birth of Christ. God and man are two outstanding facts in religion and they are essentially unchangeable and unchangeable. There is no new Christ and there is no new man. Take your stand firm. Prove all things; hold fast to the good.

Subject of morning sermon, "The Loyalty That Leads to Sacrifice." Introducing "Sacrificial Loyalty Work" in the Presbyterian Church. "Jesus' Idea of a Great Man" is the subject of the evening. The month of February brings to mind great men, when we estimate against national characters whom the world called great. There is a difference of opinion about such men. The popular man is frequently thought great; the successful man in material things, also; and the dear of notable deeds. Yet all these may lack all the essential elements of real greatness. What are the qualities that make a man great? Let him answer Who alone knows what is in man. Fortunately there was one whom he called great. By comparison with that one, other men may be estimated.

CHRISTIAN CHURCH—George Walker Bickner, pastor. Bible school at 9:30 A. M. At 6:30 P. M., the Young People's Senior, and Intermediate Societies meet at their respective places of worship. Of this great organization Miss Jane Addams of Chicago is world president. The national chairman is Mrs. Lucy Bidle Lewis of Lansdowne, Pa. "Stop the Next War," is the motto of this remarkable movement. The public, both men and women, are cordially invited to attend this mass meeting. The program will be graced with excellent special music.

THE EVIL SHEPHERD

By
E. Phillips Oppenheim
Illustrations by IRWIN MYERS

"Please go back now," she begged. "Shake yourself, take me home slowly and say nothing."

He obeyed, but his knees were shaking when he stood up. Slowly, a foot at a time, they passed from the mesh of the lilacs out into the broad stream, almost as they did so, the yellow rim of the moon came up over the low hills. As they turned into their own stream, the light was strong enough for him to see her face. She lay there like a ghost, her eyes half closed, the only touch of color in the shining strands of her beautiful hair. She roused herself a little as they swung around. He paused, leaning upon the pole.

"You are not angry?" he asked.

"No, I am not angry," she answered. "Why should I be? But I cannot talk to you about it tonight."

They walked to the edge of the land-lag-lag. A servant appeared and secured the punt.

"I'll see Timothy back yet," Margaret inquired.

"Not you, madam."

She turned to Francis.

"Francis, go and have a whisky and sit in the smoking room," she said, pointing to the open French windows. "I am going to my favorite seat. You will find me just across the bridge there."

He hesitated, filled with a passionate disqualification to leave her side even for a moment. She seemed to understand, but she pointed once more to the room.

"Should like very much," she added, "to be alone for five minutes. If you will come and find me there—please."

Francis stepped through the French windows into the smoking room, where all the paraphernalia for satisfying thirst were set out upon the sideboard. He helped himself to whisky and soda and drank it absently, with his eyes fixed upon the clock. In five minutes he stepped once more back into the garden, soft and brilliant now in the moonlight. As he did so he heard the click of the gate in the wall, and footsteps. His house with Lady Cynthia upon his arm, came into sight and crossed the lawn towards him. Francis filled through his mind with other thoughts, paused for a moment and glanced towards them curiously. Lady Cynthia seemed for a moment to have lost all her weariness. Her eyes were very bright, she walked with a new spring in her movements. Even her voice as she addressed Francis seemed altered.

"Mr. Timothy has been showing me some of the wonders of his villa—do you call it a villa or a palace?" she asked.

"It is certainly not a palace," Sir Timothy protested. "And I fear that it has scarcely the atmosphere of a villa. It is an attempt to combine certain ideas of my own with the requirements of modern entertainment. Come and have a drink with us, Leedom."

I have just had one. Francis replied. "Mrs. Hilditch is in the rose garden and I am on my way to join her."

He passed on and the two moved toward the open French windows. He crossed the rustic bridge that led into the flower garden, turned down the pergola and came to a sudden standstill before the seat which Margaret had indicated. It was empty, but in the corner lay the long-stalked lily which she had picked in the backwater. He stood there for a moment transfixed. There were other seats and chairs in the garden, but he knew before he started his search that it was in vain. She had gone. The flower,

HELP FOR THE MAN WHO WANTS TO BUILD

HOW MUCH CAN YOU AFFORD TO PAY FOR HOME?

This is the first of a series of articles to appear in this column on Ways to Finance Home Building, by The Architects' Small House Service Bureau of the United States, Inc.

Considering home building from an investment point of view, it is easy to see that if a landlord makes money on the rent he charges you for the privilege of living in his house, you certainly should be able to make money on a home of your own provided you build economically and finance wisely.

Perhaps, like thousands of other people, you are trying to decide how expensive a home you can afford. Your finances may be limited and you may be trying to determine how much you are justified in spending for a home. What follows in this column, is intended to be helpful and to assist in answering the two questions many people ask.

First: Have I sufficient money to start?

Second: Can I finance the building of a house?

Perhaps the easiest way of determining how expensive a home you can afford to build is to consider the rent you are paying. Budget authorities say you are justified in paying from one-fourth to one-fifth of your income in rent. If you are thrifty, it is possible you can buy a larger percentage for your payments on a new home, for which you would sometime have a warranty deed and complete ownership. The amount of money, however, that you can lay aside from your income for home building depends upon two things.

First, the size of your income.

Second, your ability to save money each month after deducting living expenses.

Home financing experts say you are justified in building a home for which you can complete payments in about 15 years. If, perchance, you have saved one-fifth the value of your proposed home, you should be able to pay the balance in 12 years.

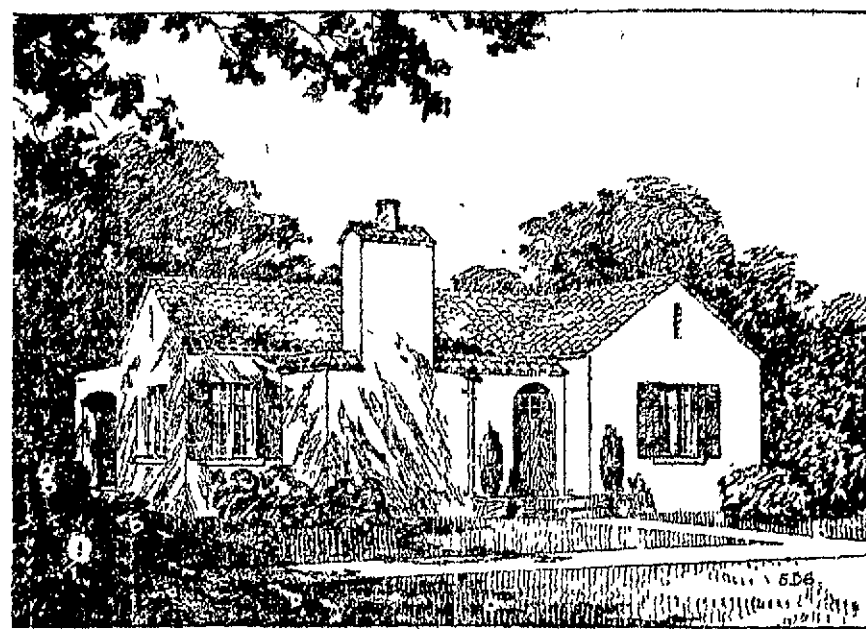

For example, the cost of the lot should represent not to exceed 30 per cent, or one-fifth the total contemplated investment. If the total investment is to be $25,000, the lot should cost approximately $5,000, and the house $20,000. If the total investment is to be $25,000, the lot should cost somewhere near $11,000, and the house $14,000.

Suppose on a home costing $25,000, $10,000 has been paid down. The payments for this home should be complete in 12 years, that is to say, the balance, $15,000, can be met on 144 equal monthly payments. To determine the monthly payment necessary to reduce the principle in this period, divide the balance, $15,000, by 144. This makes a monthly payment of $104.16, or nearly $105 per month. Figuring interest at 6 per cent, the first payment is $20. Add about $14 a month for insurance, taxes and upkeep, and you have a total of $138 a month.

While this statement is a general one and used only as an example, it may assist you in determining whether a $25,000 home is too expensive for you to build, or whether you can afford a larger dwelling.

The next article to appear in this column will discuss things you must consider for a building loan.

FIVE ROOM HOLLOW TILE BUNGALOW

Copyright, 1932—Architects' Small House Service Bureau.

THIS bungalow should appeal strongly to those seeking individuality in a home. It is romantic in character having its origin in the small farm houses of southern Italy. The style is Italian adaptation to American needs.

This house includes five main rooms: an inglenook, bathroom and five closets. The basement is only partially excavated, although a full basement can be provided if desired.

This bungalow is planned to be erected of hollow tile walls on masonry foundations. The exterior finish is troweled stucco. The roof is of mission tile.

A lot from 45 to 50 feet in width will be required. There are many interesting features about this house. The general form is unusual, and the treatment of the inglenook and chimney is delightfully impressive. The break in the roof around the chimney softens the outline. The arched entrance doorway with proportioned gables, close cornice, casement windows with solid outside blinds combine interesting details, all of which contribute to a successful whole and a happy blending of the various units.

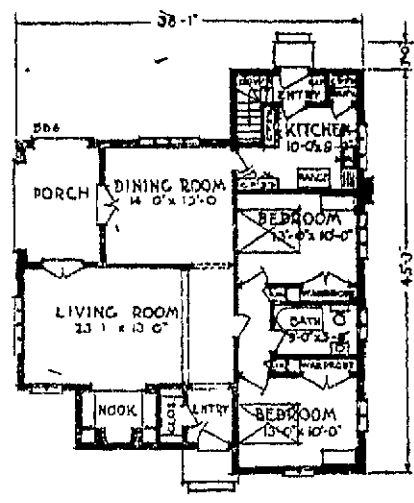

The living room is unusually long for a house of this size, 23 feet. An inglenook, containing fireplace seats and bookcase is the outstanding feature of the room.

The dining room faces the garden, and opens directly onto the rear porch, the living room, as well as the kitchen.

The kitchen is provided with every working convenience: plenty of cupboards and a storage pantry. The bedrooms are separated from the main part of the house by a private hall.

Here is a bungalow of distinction that can be built in virtually any section of the country. The whole contains is approximately 2,400 feet and the cost to build this house, including heating, plumbing, lighting, painting, ready to live in, but not including wall decorations should range between $7,500 and $9,000. In certain localities where costs are high the highest figure quoted would be too low. In other localities the lowest figure quoted would be more than sufficient. This range of $1,500 is given to cover differences in the way the house is built, how thoroughly it is equipped and completed and in what district it is erected.

Q—What is the best form of insulation to use on furnace pipes?

A—If you want real insulation use some form of cellular asbestos composition—not plain asbestos paper.

Q—Some of our radiators pound continuously. What causes this, and how can they be remedied?

A—Founding comes through faulty drainage of the piping system. Undoubtedly condensation is trapped somewhere. That is to say the pipes leading from the radiators to the furnace do not all drain downward so that pools of water stand at places. Have the radiators cleaned out and have your heating men go over the piping to see that it is properly pitched for drainage.

Q—We are having plumbing and heating systems installed in an old building. Is there not danger that the workmen will cut into the framework and weaken it? How can we be sure they will not?

A—There is considerable danger that this will occur unless you have a good engineer on the job to inspect the framing system and arrange for the proper bracing where the work is done. Do not let the plumber cut the joists.

Q—How necessary is it to paint the under side of woodwork before putting it in place. Is this not quite an expensive procedure?

A—This is not an expensive procedure. While it is not necessary to do this painting it is still a very good practice for the finished woodwork is protected thereby. A coat of linseed oil is the thing to use.

Q—We are favoring our floor. How long should they stand between coats and before they are used to get the best results?

A—The floors should stand between coats until the preceding coats have hardened so matter how long it takes. Forty-eight hours is the minimum. Don't walk on them until the day after they are perfectly hard.

Q—In selecting a lot on which to build our home, how can we be sure that it is worth the money we are asked and that it will not decrease in value later on?

A—See what the restrictions are. Find out whether anybody can build a shack nearby or a store or any thing else that would depreciate property generally about the location. Note the trend of the demand for lots such as you are thinking of buying. Make sure of the proper present valuation of the proposed lot by finding out what the adjoining property is sold for. Get a lot that is high and dry, preferably with trees on it. Future improvement such as sewer, water, paving, and so on will have to be added to the value of the lot. How much of this do you get now?

morning, you have evidently succeeded in doing what I have never seen any one else do—breaking through her indifference. I shouldn't have thought that anything short of an earthquake would have stirred Margaret, these days."

"These days," he repeated quickly. "How long have you known her?"

"We are at school together for a short time," she told him. "It was while her father was in South America. Margaret was a very different person in those days."

"How—er was she induced to marry a person like Oliver Hilditch?" Francis inquired.

His companion shrugged her shoulders.

"Who knows?" she answered indifferently. "Are you going to drop me?"

"Take me on to Grosvenor square if you will, then," she begged, "and deposit me at the ancestral mansion. I am really rather annoyed about Margaret," she went on, rearranging her veil. "I had begun to have hopes that you might have revived my taste for normal things."

"If I had had the slightest influence," he murmured.

"It was I who made no difference," she interrupted colorfully. "Now I come to think of it, the Margaret whom I used to know—and there must be plenty of her left yet—is just the right type of woman for you."

They drew up outside the house to Grosvenor square. Lady Cynthia held out her hand.

"Come and see me one afternoon, will you?" she invited.

"I'd like to very much," he replied. She lingered on the steps and waved her hand to him—a graceful, somewhat hesitant gesture.

Kentucky Girl Wins Road Essay Scholarship

Dorothy Louise Roberts, 17-year-old girl, from Harlan, Ky., who won the Road Essay Scholarship, is pictured here. She is a member of the Board of the United States Highway Transportation. The scholarship includes four years' study in any college, all expenses, tuition, board, special fees and books paid for by H. S. Firestone, of Akron, Ohio, member of the board. Her essay, "The Influence of Highway Transportation Upon the Religious Life of the Community," won the gold medal in her State competition and was then submitted in the national competition. She will attend Marietta College, Marietta, Ohio.

dependent upon cosmetics for the looks which I am still clever enough to palm off on the uninitiated."

"Why don't you lead a quieter life?" he asked. "A month or so in the country would put you all right. If you were my sister, I'd take you away for a fortnight and put you on the road to being cured."

"Then I wish I were your sister," she sighed.

"Don't think I'm unattractive," he went on, "because I'm not. It is just you people who are cursed with a restless brain who are in the most dangerous position, nowadays. The things which keep us healthy and normal physically—games, fares, dinner parties of young people, fresh air and exercise—the very things which after a time fail to satisfy the period with imagination. You want more out of life, always the something you don't understand, the something beyond. And so you keep on trying new things, and for every new thing you try, you drop an old one. Isn't it something like that?"

"I suppose it is," she admitted wearily.

"I could point out the promised land, but how could I lead you to it?" he answered.

"You don't like me well enough," she sighed.

"I like you better than you believe," he answered her, checking his speed a little. "We have met, I suppose, a dozen times in our lives. I have danced with you here and there, talked nonsense once, I remember, at a musical reception."

"I tried to flirt with you then," she interrupted.

"I was in the midst of a great case," he said, "and everything that happened to me outside it was swept out of my mind day by day. What I was going to say is that I have always liked you, from the moment when your mother presented me to you at your first dance."

"I wish you'd told me so," she said.

"I wouldn't have made any difference," he declared. "I wasn't in a position to think of a duke's daughter, in those days. I don't suppose I am now."

"Try," she begged hopefully.

He smiled back at her. The reawakening of her sense of humor was something.

"Too late," he regretted. "During the last month or so the thing has come to me which we all look forward to, only I don't think fate has treated me kindly. I have always loved normal ways and normal people, and the woman I care for is different."

"Tell me about her," she insisted.

"You will be very surprised when I tell you her name," he said. "It is Margaret Hilditch."

She looked at him for a moment in blank astonishment.

"Hilditch?" she exclaimed. "Oliver Hilditch's wife?"

"I can't help that," he declared, a little doggerly. "She's had a miserable time, I know. She was married to a scamp, I'm not quite sure that her father isn't as bad a one. Those things don't make any difference."

"They wouldn't with you," she said softly. "Tell me, did you say anything to her last night?"

"I did," he replied. "I began when we were out alone together. She gave me no encouragement to speak of, but at any rate she knows."

Lady Cynthia leaped a little forward in her place.

"Do you know where she is now?"

"She was a little startled."

"Down at the cottage, I suppose."

The butler told me that she never rose before midday."

"Then her once the butler was mistaken," his companion told him. "Margaret Hilditch left at six o'clock this morning. I saw her in traveling clothes get into the car and drive away."

"She left the cottage this morning before you?" Francis repeated, amazed.

"I can assure you that she did," Lady Cynthia insisted. "I never sleep, amongst my other peculiarities," she went on bitterly. "And I was lying on a couch by the side of the open window when the car came for her. She stopped at the end of the avenue—so that it shouldn't wait up I suppose. I saw her get up and drive away."

Francis was silent for several moments. Lady Cynthia watched him curiously.

"At any rate," she observed, "in whatever mood she went away this

Modern Daeling

Two men had planned themselves in a field and were about to fight a duel with pistols when the farmer dashed up.

"No daeling here," he declared. "I don't suppose either of you can shoot straight."

They admitted the truth of this. "Then your shots are apt to go wide and hurt somebody."

"Well, where can we fight? Got another field?"

"Go over yonder to the railroad," suggested the farmer. "What you want is a tunnel."
